Headline:
Largely dry and cloudy today. Rain, possibly heavy, early Friday.

Today:
A largely dry but cloudy day, though the odd isolated shower is possible. Occasional breaks in the cloud are also likely, producing sunny spells throughout the day. Noticeably less cold than recent days. Maximum temperature 11 deg C (52 deg F).

Tonight:
A largely dry but cloudy day, though the odd isolated shower is possible. Occasional breaks in the cloud likely, leading to sunny spells throughout. Noticeably less cold than recent days. Minimum temperature 3 deg C (37 deg F).

Friday:
The overnight rain is expected to stall over the south of the region all day, though it will likely ease and break up. Northern parts should be cloudy but dry. Maximum temperature 10 deg C (50 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Turning colder again this weekend. Often dry on Saturday though some showers. Sunday starting bright but frosty before cloud builds, similar on Monday.
